Photoshop is what the majority of the digital photography and design industry uses day in and day out. It is often used in the creation of realistic images of design projects that have to look that way from a distance. It is also used for producing other image types, such as video, as well as more graphics based things like home videos. It can be used in a variety of ways, though. It can be used to design logos, create 3D models and to make expertly layered digital paintings. In fact, it has become the standard tool of the professional designer and you will often find it used in almost all types of the creative industries. Photoshop provides all sorts of professional services to both commercial and personal users, including: Modeling Modeling Photography Layered editing Layered Editing Compositing Compositing Effect editing Effect Editing Video Video Graphic Design Graphic Design Video editing Video editing 3D Animation 3D Animation Animation Special effects Special effects Animation Video Every piece of artwork produced is likely to use at least some of the tools that are in Photoshop. This document is intended for beginners who are just learning the ropes, whether you are an absolute beginner or an experienced Photoshop user who is wanting to learn something new. We will go over the basics of how to use Photoshop, how to use the interface and how to perform basic edits. This document will be a series of lessons that go over how to use Photoshop to change a picture. It is by no means exhaustive, though it will cover the most basic things you need to know to edit and manipulate images. We'll cover a lot of these topics in great detail in future guides but for now, this is just to introduce you to the basics. In the tutorial, we are going to manipulate an image a bit to make a simple picture of the girl in the image but we are going to use some special techniques with Photoshop to make it look smooth. The girl, however, already has a smooth appearance, so she has not been photoshopped. We are going to create a shapeless texture to give her a more realistic appearance. This image is the girl who will be our model for this tutorial. When we create a texture, we are going

A 43-year-old woman from India has become the first woman to undergo surgery using a new technique that is revolutionising treating breast cancer. Dr Randeep Guleria, chairman of the Breast Health Foundation, told the BBC he had 'a feeling that this is the year of the woman' in breast cancer treatment as the new technique goes on trial next month. The new method is based on the work of a French surgeon and described by cancer charities as 'remarkable'. A 43-year-old woman from India has become the first woman to undergo surgery using a new technique that is revolutionising treating breast cancer The new technique, called Image Guided Breast Cancer Therapy (IGBT), applies radiotherapy techniques used to treat prostate cancer to the breast. It involves taking images of a patient's breast while it is in a vacuum to produce a 3D computer-generated image that will enable doctors to plan a treatment that will destroy only the cancer cells without damaging any normal tissue. The patient then has a radio-molecule attached to her body that can 'guide' the radiation beam to the cancer cells. 'This makes radiotherapy more precise,' said Dr Guleria. 'For the first time, we can treat somebody without waiting for weeks. 'We can treat the cancer at the site and reduce side-effects, reducing the risk of damage to the breast and nearby healthy tissue.' Dr Guleria told the BBC: 'We knew it would work in this way. 'I just felt I needed to tell somebody about this work as soon as we did it. 'It was like a needle in the haystack. I am so very pleased that our work has become the first to be published on the web. 'This is the year of the woman and I hope all women will take a fresh interest in their health.' A 43-year-old woman from India has become the first woman to undergo surgery using a new technique that is revolutionising treating breast cancer Dr Andrew Nargang, consultant oncologist at the Royal Marsden Hospital in Surrey, told the BBC he hoped it would become the new standard. 'For me the IGBT is the way forward in breast cancer treatment,' he said. 'Breast cancer is a tricky disease and if you look at the current treatment options we have got it is very tricky to treat at the earliest stages.

Surgical correction of the meniscus-in-septal extension of a subtalar joint pseudogout. Pseudogout is a clinical and radiographic diagnosis that can be confused with septic arthritis. Joint effusions may be painful and be associated with little active inflammation. Fluoroscopic scans will often reveal abnormal trabecular patterns, but confirmation of the diagnosis requires biopsy. The differential diagnosis of joint effusions includes gout and septic arthritis, and both conditions must be treated. Septic arthritis requires surgical drainage. In this case report, the authors document a case of pseudogout in the subtalar joint with extension into the septum, a location less commonly observed. The finding was initially overlooked and the disease was inappropriately treated as septic arthritis. The authors emphasize the importance of proper diagnosis and treatment of this condition.Q: How to add items to a list of a custom type in Kotlin? I have two custom types: Product and Color in Android. What i want to do is, when i press the addItem button to create an instance of Product and add it to a list or array of that custom type, and then by clicking the "recolor" button, add a few instances of Color and then finally delete one of the objects of Color, and hence adding a new instance to the array of Colors. I have tried a few things but i can't get it to work. This is what i have tried: class MainActivity : AppCompatActivity() { private lateinit var colorsList: ArrayList private lateinit var productsList: ArrayList private var colorIndex = 0 private var productIndex = 0 private val productTypeBinding = IntBinding() override fun onCreate(savedInstanceState: Bundle?) { super.onCreate(savedInstanceState) setContentView(R.layout.activity_main) productTypeBinding.bind(this@MainActivity.productsList) colorIndex.bind(this@MainActivity.colorsList) ProductListViewModel.observeColors(this, this@Main
